SLATE AFFAIR
OFFERING NICHE ROOFING

Slate Affair is a Vermont company specializing in slate construction and repair of decorative roofing. The idea behind purchasing the Tadano TM-1052 10-ton boom truck was for its versatility, says Tower, who regularly uses the remote control for positioning loads or with a personnel basket.

“It has opened doors to other work. When a building’s under construction, you’ll find they’ll ask you for everything from lifting materials for other contractors to the homeowner coming up with ideas for new projects—all because the crane is there already. I wanted to eliminate having to hire people to do work when most of the work involves just moving things. Now, I do less moving with more profits and less downtime because I’m not having to pay so many guys.”
